Fund Review and Outlook

January 2025 marked a strong start to the year, with both equities and bonds delivering positive returns across global markets. In the US, despite the Federal Reserve pausing its rate-cutting cycle following the negative impact of China's AI DeepSeek on AI stocks, the market demonstrated remarkable resilience. The S&P 500 rose by 2.8%, driven by robust performance in sectors outside of AI, showcasing the strength of broader market dynamics. In the eurozone, where the exposure to AI was less pronounced, the financial and consumer discretionary sectors performed particularly well, bolstered by positive macroeconomic data

The fund ended the month down 1%. While "Resource Efficiency" and "Responsible Consumption" strategies contributed positively, "Sustainable Food", "Energy Transition" and "Water Conservation" were noticeable detractors

We maintain a balanced exposure across both sectors and factors, focusing on identifying idiosyncratic alpha opportunities irrespective of broader market movements. Our current gross exposure stands at 192%, with no beta-adjusted market exposure
